

A mysterious object was discovered in the middle of a field. Anyone who views the cube can only remember it for short periods of time. We cannot create a fully accurate representation of this object, though we have made an attempt through having multiple subjects view the object and then quickly attempt to draw it. One subject wrote a cryptic message, though they cannot remember what it means. We are confident our current technology is unable to decipher this message. Another subject cannot shake the feeling that we are missing something else... so our investigation continues.

