

Certificate of Authenticity

Item: French Charleville Flintlock Musket, Model 1763

Circa: 1763-1780

Provenance: Private family collection, Pennsylvania

This document certifies that the above-referenced musket is an authentic Charleville Model 1763 flintlock musket, historically manufactured in France and widely used during the American Revolutionary War. This particular piece is believed to have been brought to and used on a private family farm around 1780.

The musket features original hardwood stock construction, a .69 caliber smoothbore barrel, and iron mountings consistent with French military production standards of the late 18th century. Accompanying the firearm are original-style paper cartridges and a period-appropriate detachable bayonet.

This item has been visually inspected, and its patina, mechanism, and markings are consistent with known examples of Charleville muskets used during the era. Historical context and supporting family documentation corroborate its lineage and use during the time of the American Revolution.
